

I support that the FCC should continue to regulate broadband service.
I have been using SONIC.NET for several years and I believe they provide excellent service as an independent ISP. I think it is very important that the FCC should continue to support independent ISPs such as SONIC.NET. These are small businesses and have made many important contributions to the development of the internet, which we all enjoy now. I think it's very important that phone companies provide the necessary connections for DSL service to independent ISPs. Thank you very much for your support.
